Weeks of work per application. And often, a rejection with no reason.

Levier finds the Swiss foundations whose statutory purpose covers your project, checks their deadlines and writes a letter to each. Your organisation reads, signs and sends.

Where your weeks go

"We don't have time to apply."

A rejected application cost 32 hours on average, an accepted one 63 (2019 data). That time is then missing from the project.

"We don't know which foundations to write to."

Switzerland has 13,782 public-benefit foundations (end of 2025). Only some of them give grants, and some accept no unsolicited applications.

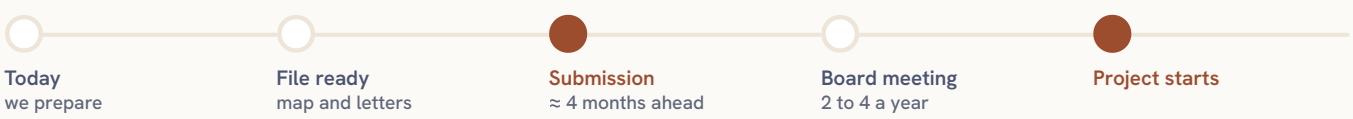

"Rejections come with no explanation."

A late or incomplete file is set aside without review, and one outside the purpose often is too. The rejection gives no reason, and you start again without knowing what to change.

These rejections have causes that can be fixed: a purpose that does not cover the project, a template letter, a submission after the deadline.

A missed meeting delays the project by 3 to 6 months.

Several large foundations decide two to four times a year and want the file about four months before the project starts. A project that has already begun is generally no longer funded.

What you receive, and when

Deliverables and dates fixed on day one.

15 minutes

The first conversation

You present the project and the missing amount. We tell you whether foundations can fund it and whether our offer is useful to you.

2 weeks

The map of your funders

20 to 30 foundations out of nearly 15,000. For each: the sentence of its purpose that matches your project, its deadline, the documents required, and whether it accepts applications.

4 weeks

One letter per foundation

It quotes the foundation's purpose and says what its support would fund, in French, German or English. You read, sign and send.

6 months

The calendar kept

Every submission before its deadline, a follow-up at the right time, every answer recorded, a written update each month.

Fixed prices, written before we start

Main offer

Campaign

CHF 3,500

To fund one specific project.

- Map of 20 to 30 foundations
- 10 letters, one per foundation
- Calendar and follow-ups over 6 months
- Written update every month

Ongoing support

CHF 650 / month

For organisations that fund several projects.

- Applications throughout the year
- Reports to foundations after approval
- Watch for new foundations

Indicative prices, written quote before we start. Fixed fees based on the work: never a percentage.

Our guarantee

If we do not find at least 15 foundations whose purpose matches your project, the Diagnostic is free. The decision rests with each foundation's board.

No commission. The application stays yours.

Swissfundraising rules out commissions on funds obtained (ethical principles, ch. 4), and the Ernst Göhner Foundation refuses applications tied to a commission. Levier charges fixed fees; your organisation signs and sends.

Who is behind Levier

Alexandre Cazes graduated from the IHEID and worked as a scientific adviser for the RTS. To fund two master's degrees he wrote to more than a hundred foundations: on the applicant side, he did himself the work he offers you.
